ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Problems That Affect the Dinner Plates, Dividend Checks and Taxpayers of Every Individual, National and International Problems, comparable from Local Welfare.

The march of New Deal legislation through the courts continues. In the past three weeks, three Administration measures have been subjected to judicial scrutiny and two of the three have found wanting. Last week, of course, will be said by the Supreme Court, when it meets for its term, but present decisions aside a lead on what the highest court of all is likely to decide.

First case concerned the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This bureau pays farmers for reducing their crops, raises the price through processing and floor taxes. Plaintiff in the case was a farming company, which had refused to pay $32,000 demanded by the collector of internal revenue.

The district court, the Government was upheld, and the company ordered to come through with $32,000. It appealed to the circuit court in Boston, which reversed the lower court, by a 2-1 vote, and held that Congress cannot possess the power to delegate taxing authority to the Secretary of Agriculture. If this decision is given validity by the Supreme Court, the Government may be refund processing taxes already collected, and pay future taxes out of regular funds.

Second case concerned the policy of the Public Works Administration in condemning land to use for post federal housing projects. It is very close to the heart of Henry Jones, who has planned $20,000,000 slum clearance and post housing program. "Suits brought by a property owner did not wish to sell at the Government's price, wished to have for greater compensation. The small circuit court held for plaintiff, said that the Government has not the power to condemn land for this purpose."

Third case involved one of the debates of Administration titles--the Tennessee Valley Authority. A few months ago it was brought to restrain the Authority from selling electricity in competition with private power and to invalidate contracts made between the Authority and various towns in the Tennessee Valley area. Federal District Judge Grubb held for the plaintiff, and the contracts were illegal. Government appealed to the circuit court in New Orleans, and Judge overruled Judge Grubb, and that the Government can power in competition with private.

WIGHT GIVES SOLO AT I. O. O. F. OUTING

H. Wight of Bethel, a resident of Maine Odd Fellows Home for several years, sang "Black Joe" during the outing of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs at home Saturday. Mr. Wight has been for many years a director of choruses and classes, and 200 members of the order in attendance.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Ruth Lord entertained Wednesday evening, July 24, in honor of birthday of her mother, Mrs. Bennett. The guests were: Mrs. Gaudet, Mrs. Alice Gaudet, Mrs. Hester Sanborn, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Mrs. Grace Lord, Mrs. Emily Chapman, Mrs. Thurston, and the guest of honor, Mrs. Bennett. The party was won by Mrs. Gaudet and Mrs. Thurston. Delicious refreshments were served at the end of the evening.

AN APPRECIATED GIFT

At the morning service in the Congregational Church last Sunday a beautiful American Flag was presented to the Church by Mrs. William R. Chapman in memory of her late husband, Dr. William Rogers Chapman. Sunday would have been his 89th birthday, had he been spared to be with us. In accepting the handsome gift on behalf of the Church, Rev. Herbert Wallace expressed the thanks of the congregation and Parish to Mrs. Chapman, and also read the following poem, based on the familiar missionary hymn. It was written for the occasion by Mrs. Lulu Faulkner Perry of Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Chapman's sister.

"Fling out the banner!" Angels bend Above us in this sacred place, And may God's blessing now descend To sanctify us with His grace.

"Fling out the banner!" of good cheer, And spread its brightness far and wide, Its glory now to be so near, The Cross on which our Savior died.

"Fling out the banner!" Gift of love, With memories woven in each star, They point us to that home above, Where many waiting loved ones are.

"Fling out the banner!" Let it wave, The flag our nation doth revere, Flag of our country true and brave, It stands with God's own people here.

"Fling out the banner!" wide and high, Skyward it guides us with colors bright, And nearer the Cross let us draw nigh, And nearer God's own Heavenly light.

"Fling out the banner!" Angels bend Above us as we kneel in prayer, The Cross and Flag their radiance blend To lighten every weight of care.

JACK HAYES

Jack Hayes passed away at the home of Mrs. Ida Bean Wednesday night, following a shock which he suffered about three weeks ago.

Mr. Hayes came here about six years ago and has since been in the employ of L. E. Davis. It is thought that he came from Wytopitlock and efforts are being made to get in touch with his relatives. Little is known of his family but it is understood that he is survived by a brother and two daughters. He had made his home on "Cedar Street," where he bought one of Mr. Davis' camps, and was there when stricken. He was about 60 years old.

POMONA GRANGE HELD AT OTISFIELD TUESDAY

Rev. R. A. Brandon Explains Gambling Menace--To Give Degree at Andover Aug. 21

About a hundred Grangers gathered at the Pomona meeting with Frederic Roble Grange at Otisfield Tuesday. All officers were present except the lecturer and Flora. Mrs. Edith Knightly acted as lecturer and Mrs. Ellis Davis as Flora. Charles George was present as usual and plans to celebrate his 101st birthday at the next meeting which will be held at the new hall at Welchville. The new building will be nearing completion by that time.

A part of the program was provided by a delegation of Andover Grange members including E. R. Cobb, V. W. Canham, Mrs. Bertha Dyer of Auburn, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Harrington Mrs. Bertha Taylor, George Roberts of Topsham, Mrs. Clara Vosmus, Lisbon, each making remarks, and an original poem and encore were given by Mrs. Dyer. A reading and encore were given by Miss Ruth Buzzell of Norway. Mrs. Edith Knightly, as the chairman of the Home and Community Welfare committee, called on all the committee members to tell what had been done in their granges. The members were Mrs. Battle Millett, Paris; Mrs. Addie Saunders, Hanover; Mrs. Walter Chandler, West Sumner; Mrs. Ellis Davis, Woodstock.

CANNIBALS WILL EAT BETHEL TOWN TEAM

The Zulu Cannibals, one of the best road clubs now in the east, opposes the Bethel Town Team on Thursday, Aug. 15, in a game that should give local fans a type of baseball that has been rare on the Gould Athletic Field of late. The game will start at 5 p. m.

The Cannibals, a road club which takes to the field in grass skirts, a couple of earrings, and plenty of paint and a colored club which a week ago played and won a 14 inning contest from Toronto before a crowd of 7,500 fans. Charlie Henry, former Detroit Star pitcher, who is responsible for rounding up the Zulu Cannibals, has added an even more bizarre touch to his outfit by adapting native African names, some of which have been borrowed from chiefs and rulers in Daga, Timbuctu and Congo regions. While this jungle tribe has never pushed a war canoe down the Congo, they are real ball hawks on a novelty and business jamboree and promise to give the Bethelites a busy game.

The Cannibals hold the distinction of being the only attraction ever granted the privilege by Warden Lawes of playing a week-day exhibition at Slog-Slog Prison, with the exception of the New York Giants who pay a visit to this famous penal institution each year. The G. A. Field should be packed for this attraction, and those who frequent adjacent lawns and sidewalks should be more than willing to ante up when the collector appears. Manager "Speed" Eames announces that there will be no padding of the Bethel roster, but that the team, gathered behind the grandstand throwing arm of Center Quinby, will give the Zulus a real resistance, before being boiled in the cannibal pot as seasoning for the healthy stew the cannibals are eating in the way of games won.

Mrs. Evelyn Chapman is spending the week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Wallace Thomas, of Hanover.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Bean and daughter Joyce were guests of his uncle, W. F. Dean, and family several days last week.

ANNUAL CHURCH FAIR

The Ladies Club of the Congregational Church will conduct a sale and fair on Thursday, August 15. There will be the usual attractions and some innovations.

An exhibit of quilts, old and new, will be worth seeing. A sale of cut flowers and small potted plants will be new and interesting. Mrs. L. W. Ramsell is chairman of the food table and promises an abundance of delicious food for sale.

The fancy work table is specializing in infants and small childrens things. The stuffed animal department will be colorful and cuddly. Mrs. W. H. Thurston and other capable cooks will serve tea, sandwiches, and cakes.

The mystery table will intrigue and the candy table cater. Something to please and satisfy everyone. Garland Chapel, August 15, Thursday at half past two.

COLORFUL RECITAL PRESENTED BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE

By J. Daniel MacDonald in the Portland Evening News. Considerable artistry marked the vocal recital by Miss Margaret Carter, attractive young contralto at the State Street parish house last night. Classic airs, German lieder, and ultra-modern songs made up the content of the program. The young singer was presented by her teacher, Royal Dammun of Boston.

The young singer disclosed a rich, velvety voice that seemed more of the soprano timber than contralto, and the voice register was nicely developed throughout its range. Earnestness and a feeling for the moods of her songs were characteristics of her interpretations.

Miss Carter opened her program with three classic airs, sung in fluent Italian. The first O Del Mio Dolce Amor was with beautiful tone color and smooth, even legato line. The second, Se Flordindo e Fedele by Scarlatti a gay little piece, given with vocal fluency and great vivacity. To close the group the singer gave the old familiar Omnia Mei Fu by Handel, displaying a growing command of the true classic style.

In decided contrast the singer next offered three ultra-modern songs of unusual worth. The first was the whimsical When I Bring to You Colored Toys by Carpenter, charmingly sung by the artist. This was followed by the somewhat sombre The Day is No More, also by Carpenter, offering the singer ample scope for her interpretive gifts. The final number was the compelling Russian song, O Thou Billowy Harvest Field by Rachmaninoff, sung with not a little dramatic emphasis.

For her group of German Lieder, Miss Carter chose three of the more familiar songs of Schubert, successfully projecting the mood of and giving each song the benefit of good vocal coloring. A high point in artistry was reached in her rendition of the exquisite The Young Nun, one of the finest things in song literature.

To close her program Miss Carter gave three more songs by representative modern composers. The first was the scintillating Feast of Lanterns by Bartock, the second, Wings of the Night by Winter Walts, and the last number on the program was very appropriately titled Take Joy Home by Bartock. This last proved to be a splendid song and it was well done by the artist.

In answer to spontaneous applause the singer obliged with the hitting encore, The Billman by John Barnes Wells. At the close of the recital the young singer was the recipient of many floral bouquets from her admirers.

Miss Madeline Meredith, at the piano, captured a very large share of the applause for her strikingly fine accompaniments.

William Wight was in Rangleley Sunday

WHY DO I WRITE?

D. S. Brooks

I am not deceived into thinking that my contributions give you any great inspiration. It is not with that idea that I write. Possibly my pen may furnish simply a little entertainment for some; but I would like rather to feel that the story I do read between the lines is my real purpose. And that is what I may give out a little comfort, here and there, to those who need encouragement. Life is so short at the longest; and we need each other's help and sympathy.

On Sunday, the eighteenth of the month, I will arrive at the sixteenth milestone of my age; and—have gathered much experience in certain departments of human endeavor.

I will not select any Bible theme this week; we will hold instead friendly chat. I am wondering what each of you readers say to me if we had the opportunity to meet and converse; concerning religious or political issues. I would like to know your opinions. If this chance comes through personal contact, or by printed page, will you be so kind as to frankly state them? I would welcome any friendly letter or post cards were you so disposed to show that interest. You did give me a little good cheer; and I might offer some helpful advice to you. Thus, the benefits could prove mutual. During a twelve-month period, it's a long time of names that attracts notice these pages, from the different respondents. The news is becoming more and more interesting to the writers deserve the compliment. A friendly contest in this department will make this paper a coming success way across the county lines.

Again I refer to "ego," but not egotism. From a child up I have always wanted to be a public speaker. Nothing selfish at all in this long ambition. In the teens, I had a dream of a political career—but were a little timid in speaking. The thought of appearing before a large audience shivered through our frame. Always responded heartily whenever the Church called for a word of verse or prose at some social function. That did not make a choking sensation in the throat which of course embarrasses a speaker. Some of you grown-ups who have never felt it should give a chance now. Perhaps it is not too late! I have sympathy for a child when "their" feet touch the platform for the first time. Well, finally, back there we look courage upon a larger scale of thousands people, and gave a prepared address before an audience of prepared address on the subject of American Citizenship. We were not quite twenty; so of course were lacking in experience of Franklin Roosevelt or a "William Borah." But the suffering audience declared that it was good; their cheering and hearty comments gave us more self-confidence. Many are the occasions we have spoken since, but none have given me greater satisfaction as the handshaking following that first, real, public, effort. Our fight was to attend a good law school, and thoroughly prepare for chosen career. We did study, but it came in later years, by own fireside; more as a pastime to gratify a desire for enlightenment on legal subjects than for anything else. When our public speaking was completed, God had taken; and our feet had begun to tread the pathway of the Christian ministry. Now, should you call at home, I can point out with me to two libraries; besides my good books of fine fiction, other prized volumes accumulated during the years. My books are real companions; and from them I derive much good. But the life leads them all to a sacred shrine within my heart.

I am about to close this off-hand message of today; and I wish that might impress you, everyone, that I have most kindly thoughts concerning the people of the territory where this paper circulates. There are many readers and many writers. One group is interested in a thing and another class in nothing else, and so on. But I should be, I believe, some-meeting place where we can all gather and enjoy the blessings of unity in a common brotherhood. Perhaps it can best be found right here in this "weekly"—like the holding of a public forum. I cannot keep perfectly quiet; I must give expression to the hidden "dynamite" that is within me. If I cannot use the platform, it will have to be the "pen,"—until all activities cease. I want to thank you all for your attention these four years; and also show my appreciation to the publisher for the space I have used. Now, goodbye, until next week.

STATE ISSUES NEW BOOKLET ON FISHING, HUNTING, CANOEING

A new forty-page booklet containing information on hunting, fishing and camping and said to subjects than any similar piece of literature yet published was placed at the disposal of Maine's visitors by the Maine Development Commission.

Compiled by Everett Groaton, recently appointed executive secretary, the new addition to the Commission's comprehensive list of booklets lists the State's attractions in the allied outdoor sports under the following chapters: Maine for Fishing; When To Come—What To Bring—What To Wear; Fishing Regulations; Open Fishing Seasons; Maine Fish Hatcheries; What Maine Offers for Fishing; Where To Go; Come To Maine By Airplane; Maine For Hunting; When and Where To Hunt; Maine For Canoeing.

The front and back covers of the booklet were designed by Maurice Day, well-known artist now residing at Damariscotta, and depict hunting and fishing scenes in red and black on a cream background. Many typical hunting, fishing, and canoeing photographs are scattered through the booklet which also contains illustrated maps pertaining to air travel, canoeing, hunting and fishing.

Entitled "Maine Hunting, Fishing, canoeing," the new booklet may be obtained by out-of-State visitors by writing to the Maine Development Commission, State House, Augusta, or by calling at that address.

POMONA GRANGE

Rev. Ralph A. Brandon of North Waterford gave an interesting talk on gambling. He said that because the fair is about to commence and the people will be enticed to part with their hard earned money it might be a good time to give a word of warning. He defined gambling as taking a chance by which we get something for nothing and if we win somebody else must lose.
He said chances on a quilt at a church fair is as much gambling as putting a dime on the turn of a wheel and winning, perhaps a beautiful baby doll. The rich man can gamble and if he loses there is not great harm, but it seems that the rich man was more often than does the poor man. The operator of the game is the one that always stands to win. He runs the game to make money and poor wretched people. The money thus wanted at games at a fair might buy a new pair of shoes that somebody in the family would like in the winter or a choice bit of fruit or something good to eat for the family. There is a tremendous amount of profit made in the gambling business in this country, enough so that the national debt could be paid in seven years.
It is sometimes said that the factors gamble on his crops. He takes a chance but it is not gambling if he loses something on a crop it is not because somebody else wins. The stock market is a form of gamble and somebody successfully loses. The trading in foodstuffs in the stock exchange is a gamble because on paper the wheat or the corn passes through the hands of many people who do it with the hope of winning and every transaction makes the cost of that commodity so much higher to the consumer.

Gambling is akin to stealing. When a person steals they take property without the owner's knowledge, when one gambles another's property is taken with his partial consent. If at a church fair it was announced that a quilt will be given away to a poor family and the tickets are to be sold each there would not be such a ready sale as if it is put up at a raffle.

He commended the management of some towns in Maine who have refused to use the pari-mutuel system of betting on horse racing.

Mr. Brandon prefaced his remarks with some witty stories illustrating his points.

At the business meeting it was voted to accept the invitation of them on Aug. 24 at Andover and confer the degree. A rehearsal of the officers will be held at Hyman

Pond, Monday evening, Aug. 19.

YOUR SAFETY BRAKES ON CONGRESS

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman, Sentinels of the Republic

Among the amendments recently proposed at Washington are several whose effect would be to scrap the Constitution and the Supreme Court and assign all their authority to Congress.

Is Congress worthy of so overwhelming a vote of confidence? Is it capable of exercising wisely such vast powers? Let's see what it might mean to us in America, if Congress, uncontrolled by the Constitution, were suddenly to have all the authority now exercised by certain legislative bodies and dictators in Europe.

It could mean, for example, the end of Home Rule. A majority of Congressmen, thus free of constitutional restraints, could, if they desired, supplant your own mayor or governor with a dictator or alphabetical commission from Washington. They could change the land laws of Pennsylvania, the election laws of Georgia, or the traffic laws of your home town. And, short of revolution, you'd have to take it and like it.

It could mean the death of personal liberty in America. If a majority of unhampered Congressmen didn't like your religion or your politics, or your economic theories, they could pass laws to jail or expatriate you for them.

Suppose a majority in Congress wanted to penalize you for too free an expression of your political opinions.

Suppose they decided that you couldn't attend any neighborhood political rally under penalty of going to jail.

Suppose they determined that your children shouldn't go to schools of your choice, but only to schools approved by Washington.

Suppose they wanted to take your home away from you without compensation to erect thereon a statue to, say, Huey Long.

Under the restraints exercised by the people through their Constitution they couldn't do those things today. But if Congressional authority superseded our Fundamental Law and its Bill of Rights, all Congress would have to do would be to pass the necessary acts, and any or all of them would be accomplished.

Of course, no one would say that the present Congress would pass such acts, even if it had the power.
But no one can say either what a future Congress, unrestrained by the Constitution, might attempt.
Who, twenty-five years ago, could have imagined a Germany or a Russia governed as those nations are today? Unlimited power, granted to legislative groups and dictators, made it possible.

Don't let them scrap the Constitution, which has protected the rights of American citizens for a century and a half, and will continue to protect them as long as it is preserved!

Thus the New Deal came to the bar three times—won once, and lost twice. This is similar to past experience, and illustrates a fact recognized by Administration friends and opponents alike—that much of the legislation proposed and pushed by the President cannot be held valid without Constitutional change. And that promises to be the prime plank in next year's general election.

Every business publication and commentator seems agreed on this:
The business outlook continues to improve, with advances especially noteworthy in the durable goods industries. These heavy industries are in a better position now than at any time since depression set in.
In the words of one magazine, "It is a durable goods summer."

Here is some specific information:

COPPER—Recent demand exceptionally heavy. Tonnage sold in first half of July was equal to the quota for two months under the NRA code. Price advances forecast by some.

MACHINE TOOL—Tremendous
gain registered in dollar volume.
Index recently touched 91% of the 1929 average—best level since 1929.

MOTORS—Reports continue to be good. Passenger car sales for the first half of the year ran about 45% ahead of the same period in 1934. In June, Ford sold most cars for that month since 1930. Chevrolet surpassed all June records since 1929.

ELECTRIC POWER—Recent
month showed highest consumption since the later part of 1931.

STEEL—At 40% of capacity, a substantial advance over a few months ago.

RETAIL TRADE—Held steady into the summer, avoiding the usual seasonal drop.

These serve to illustrate the trend. Question now is, can advance be continued?

European observers who can compare time from the Italian Ethiopian trouble, are casting cynical glances on Germany these days.

Another Hitler "purge" is underway—bloodless as yet, though many fear blood-letting will soon start.

Objects of persecution are, of course, the Jews. And along with them are the Catholics, clergymen of all denominations, and members of the Stahlhelm—the German equivalent of the American Legion.
Reason for the attack on the veterans is that they contain reactionaries—in other words, men who are opposed to the Hitler dictatorship.

Strict censorship prevails in Germany. Individual liberties are further proscribed. Concentration camps are jammed. Hitler's sword again hangs above those Germans who think him less than divine.

NEWS of the WEEK

WAR AND LEMONS

Geneva, Switzerland—Diplomatic backing and filling continues over the Italo-Ethiopian question. The League Council has ceded to Italy's demands and no steps have as yet been taken to make war seem any less inevitable. Meanwhile the price of lemons rises in America. Mussolini is sending all he can to Africa to stave off dysentery among his troops.

NOT NOW—IN NOVEMBER

Washington, D. C.—The huge $4,880,000,000 work relief program has so far put only 100,000 to work.
Controller General John R. McCarl watches New Deal expenditures with an eagle eye. President Roosevelt took him on a week-end fishing trip and McCarl promised to do all he could to expedite distribution of the money. With McCarl cooperation the President hopes to have 90 to 95% of the country's employable idle at work by November.

"BORE FROM WITHIN"

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—At the Third
International's seventh congress, Earl Browder, Kansas secretary of the American Communist Party, announced that his 20,000 followers were busily sowing propaganda among 1,000,000 laborers. Dole-gates instructed Young Communist Leagues to join all groups and societies, athletic, cultural, religious to "bore from within." When Washington coked its ear for violation of the 1933 agreement, Moscow quickly appended the dictum: No Soviet meddling in the domestic affairs of individual national Communist parties.

TEMPTATION

Lakehurst, N. J.—Flyers over darkest Africa and wildest Asia expect casual fire from ardent natives. But in civilized America riflemen can resist anything but blimps.
After a flight along the coast off Point Pleasant, N. J., hangar men found the hole of a high-powered rifle bullet in the stabilizer fin of the Navy's all-metal ZMC-2. Twice previously this ship has suffered direct hits. Pilots of blimps dread unsettled country in the hunting season.

BRITISH INDIA BILL UNSATIS- FACTORY

London, England—After 15,000-odd words of oratory, 50 days of debate, and 300 amendments, the India Bill emerged, a 100,500 word document. To the delight of English diehards, practically every group in India objected to the bill on one ground or another. Establishing a Federal government in India and granting the franchise to 29,000,000 men and 6,000,000 women, the bill pleased neither conservatives nor radicals in either country, but all agreed that it gave the Indian Empire a chance for its longest step toward self-government.

"BLOW AGAINST LAW ENFORCE- MENT"

Malone, N. Y.—Last December
the United States indicted Arthur Fliegenheimer, alias Dutch Schultz, for evading $90,000 taxes and penalties on an alleged $2,000,000 income for 1929, '30, and '31. While waiting his second trial in Malone he gallanted the backwoods community's good will by setting up drinks. In Syracuse prosecutors had failed to convict him on his own beer payment records. This time, concentrating on Schultz's horrendous career, they failed again. Said Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant to the acquitting jury, "You will go home with the satisfaction—if it is a satisfaction—that you have rendered a blow against law enforcement and given aid and encouragement to the people who doubt the law." "There is no place for him here," said Mayor La Guardia of New York. "Well, I'm going there," retorted Schultz.

550 ATTEND OXFORD COUNTY 4-H FIELD DAY

Annual 4-H Field Day was attended by 47 of the 60 clubs, ten of which were present with 100% attendance of club members. Many parents and visitors were present making the total attendance 550.

In the morning water sports were conducted by Harry Brown and Edward Brown. Frank Culbert, member of the South Paris Boy Scout troop and Rex Waite of Norway acted as life guards.

The afternoon program was started with a general assembly. Each club present answered the roll call by a cheer, song or stunt, which were judged by Mrs. Clinton Bisbee, Mrs. B. F. Twitchell, and Carroll Wadsworth. Ribbons were awarded as follows: First place to Ever Up and Coming Club of Rumford Point; second to Young Gardeners of North Paris; and third to Jolly Workers of Bryant Pond.

Alvin Hersey of North Waterford, a University of Maine track man, took charge of the field events assisted by Bill Dillinger of Center Lovel.

The list of clubs attending 100% were: Bear River of North Newry; Snappy Eight of East Bethel; Top Knotch Girls of Dixfield; Pine Tree 4-H Club of East Stoneham; Best We Can Do of Locke Mills; Pleasant Valley, West Bethel; 4-H Clover, South Hiram; Milton Hard Workers, Milton; Pleasant Pond 4-H, West Sumner; and the Crystal 4-H of Rumford Center.

The banner given and made by the Jolly Workers of Bryant Pond for the high scoring club at Field Day, was awarded to the Forache Club of East Stoneham led by Delwin Merrill; second place was won by the Bisbee Field 4-H Club of Rumford and they were awarded a watermelon. Jolly Workers 4-H Club of Bryant Pond won the peak of peanuts for third place.

Banks Rapidly Reduce Debt

Although the sum of $1,364,000, has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1935, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,340,000,000, or more than 72%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Loans were authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to 7,396 banks and trust companies in an aggregate amount of $2,350,000,000, but of this sum $345,000,000 was withdrawn or cancelled and $140,000,000 has not yet been taken on by the borrowers.

MAKING IT HARDER FOR BANK ROBBERS

Mechanical Devices That Impede the Work of Bandits Described by Bankers Association Official.

The impediments which the hard working bank robber now meets in plying his trade among small as well as large banks are described by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager American Bankers Association in charge of its Protective Department, in an article in "Banking" published by his organization.

"Protective equipment will minimize if not prevent loss," Mr. Baum says, "such as the silent automatic type of alarm, approved tear gas systems, several styles of bandit resisting enclosures and timelocks, or safes equipped with timelocks, which can be set for intervals of a few minutes."

"The silent automatic alarms operate in the beginning of a holdup and through action carried out by the bank employees in obedience to the bandit's commands. They are adaptable to the smaller banks which continue to be easiest targets for bank robbery."

Tear Gas Systems

"Tear gas systems have their advantages as self-contained protective units where outside aid is inconvenient or too remote from the bank to be effective. One objection to the use of tear gas in preventing holdups is the need of pressing a lever or button to discharge it. Although this necessary action seems too much to expect of the victims in a crisis where their lives are in jeopardy, the fact remains that tear gas systems have defeated bank robbery. Its deterrent value is also important."

"Different styles of bandit resisting enclosures are available. The lock manufacturers also produce timelocks which can be set to open at intervals of five minutes or longer. These locks are especially adapted for attachment to small safes or chests for safeguarding surplus funds while the bank is open for business."

Agriculture and Industry

Returns for the first quarter of 1935 for industrial corporations publishing quarterly reports show net profits of over 100 per cent more than for the same period of 1934. The total farm value of all the major crops, exclusive of livestock, rose in 1934 to $4,782,423, 000, as compared with $4,114,245,000 in the previous year and $2,852,105, 000 in 1933.

The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened after an exhaustive study had been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned.

The King Bird
and the Crow

by

LEONARD A. BARRETT

Did you ever watch a king bird chase a crow? If not you have an interesting experience awaiting you. In the chase there is enacted a drama which illustrates the force of persistence and the failure of unused power. The kingbird, otherwise known as the bee-martin, is about the size of a sparrow. In some respects it is said to be a parasite because the mother bird lays her eggs in the nest of some other bird and is about the only species which refuses to hatch out its own young. In every other respect the king bird is a model of untiring persistence. The crow, for which the king bird seems to have a very pronounced dislike, is about five times as large as its enemy and as many times as strong. It is very amusing to see the little bird chasing the large bird through the air in a most ferocious attack, always the victor in the struggle, unless the crow, by flying faster, can escape. The crow never strikes back, even though its strength is many times greater and could, in a minute, crush out the life of the little king bird. In this little drama in birdland is enacted the struggle between power and persistence.

When we shift our point of view from the birds to our daily experience, we meet the very same thing. Many times have we wondered why a person with so small amount of strength and talent succeeds in life's grim struggle, while the more fortunately endowed lags behind in the race. Latent power is of no value unless used. Money, for instance, in the possession of which seems to lie the balance of power, is of no value unless it circulates. A hoarded dollar earns no interest. Unexpressed impulses die. The power in the rapids, unless harnessed for the purpose of driving turbines, goes to waste. That person who refuses to take part and stand up for the right soon becomes a prey to the imposter, whose strength may in comparison be no greater than the king bird; but, because of persistence may succeed in his vicious attacks. Sometimes it appears as though evil forces are more powerful than good forces. They are not more powerful but frequently more persistent. Good forces are always stronger but frequently more dormant and silent than those which make for evil. Unless the good forces strike back, the evil will win. "A falling drop at last will wear a stone." "Much rain wears the marble."

"Victory," says Napoleon, "belongs to the most persevering."

"Burned-Out" Eyes

The destructive result of eyestrain is explained on the grounds that six of the twelve sets of nerves in the head lead to the eyes. Overwork of these delicate nerves not only saps the energy available for other nerves, but "burns out" the optical nerves and renders ineffective the eyes, one of the principal channels of knowledge.

FARM BUREAU—GRANGE
FIELD DAY AT RUMFORD

The annual Oxford County Pomona Grange—Farm Bureau Field Day will be held this year at Walter Holman's farm at Rumford Point on Thursday, August 22. Mr. Holman has an ideal place for the event in his pasture which is a beautiful spot at the foot of a 200 foot mountain rising straight up from the level ground below. The Holmans have been on this farm only about three years but during that time have taken a real interest in Farm Bureau and Extension work. Mr. Holman and his two sons are much interested in the production of potato seed and plan to increase the size of their poultry unit and to improve their pasture and hayland to furnish economical feed for a barn full of dairy cows. Mr. Holman's invitation to the two organizations is very cordial and he and his family want to do everything possible to give everyone a good time.

Dr. Arthur A. Hauck, President of the University of Maine, will be the main speaker and the people of Oxford County are fortunate to have the opportunity of having a man who is such a capable speaker and who takes such a real interest in the problems of farm people of the state. He came to Maine only a little over a year ago but in that time has become well acquainted with Extension work and the service it is rendering to Maine people. Sports and field events will start at 9:30 Standard Time and occupy most of the forenoon and lunch is scheduled at 11:30. A picnic lunch will be in order and cold drinks, ice cream, hot dogs, etc., will be sold by the County 4-H club.

Sporting events which the committee in charge is planning are of equal interest to men and women. Another automobile slow race will be held this year. The idea is to see who can drive his or her automobile a specified distance over a rough field in high gear the slowest. If a car stalls or stops it is disqualified and the last one to finish wins. A wheelbarrow race will determine what man can wheel a woman whom he may select a specified distance in the shortest time. A woodchopping contest is planned to determine who will represent the county in a similar contest at Farm and Home Week in Orono next year. The man who cuts down his tree and cuts two sticks off it in the shortest time wins. The women will be given a chance to show their accuracy and skill in throwing rolling pins and baseballs and the men will have an opportunity to try their luck at driving a golf ball. Teams consisting of an equal number of men and women will compete in a potato race. Horseshoes will be on hand to take care of spare moments if there are any.

Purchased White House
District July 16, 1790

The United States government acquired the White House grounds when, by act approved July 16, 1790, congress accepted a district of territory not exceeding ten square miles, to be located on the Potomac river, and authorized the President to appoint three commissioners to survey the area under his jurisdiction. The act also empowered the commissioners to accept such land on the eastern side of the river within the said district as the President should deem proper for the use of the United States.

The site selected by the President was that area embraced in the old city located between Rock creek on the west, Florida Avenue on the north, the eastern branch on the east and the Potomac river on the south. Within this site the President, before the city was laid out into squares, selected 17 parcels for use of the United States. Among these was Appropriation No. 1, extending from and including Lafayette park down to B street north (now Constitution avenue).

For these 17 parcels the United States government paid the original proprietors at the rate of $25 per acre, Maryland currency (about $60.07) in lawful money of the United States.

The original proprietors of the land constituting the White House grounds were Samuel Davidson, who owned the upper part, and David Burnes, who owned the lower part, the dividing line running from the northeast corner of the southwest corner.—Washington Star.

THE NEW DEAL AND THE SUPREME COURT

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

THE New Deal has been tossing about in stormy political seas during the past few months in its struggle to gain the shore of economic security, and has at last run aground on the Constitution of the United States, from which not even the throwing over of billions of dollars in ballast seems likely to be able to lift it.

Court decisions have been falling thick and fast, now that New Deal legislation has had a chance to get into application, and claims against it have had a chance to find their way to the tribunals. At one time approximately 400 cases involving New Deal legislation were pending in the courts.

Many of these have already been decided upon, some by the lower courts and a few finally by the Supreme court. There are about 17 of them which the consensus of the press has imbued with more importance than all of the others. Of these cases 15 have been decided against the present administration and two for it. All decisions but one were rendered since the beginning of the year; eight of them were Supreme court decisions, leaving the others to be appealed.

Most important of all such decisions was that which threw out virtually the entire structure of the NRA, knocking the props from under New Deal planning. This left the President with three courses of action open: To build a new and better NRA, to simply suspend action for a while and "let 'em see how they like it," or to campaign for an amendment to the Constitution which would further centralize legislative power to aid the administration in coping with changing social and economic conditions.

For a while it looked as if the President's policy was to be a combination of all three, but of late weeks the third has emerged more and more clearly. What has led up to the present state may be followed through a resume of the important cases which have been decided by Federal District courts and the Supreme court.

Test New Deal Legislation.

The first judicial straw which indicated "the way the storm winds were blowing" was the decision of the Supreme court on January 7 of this year, when it declared unconstitutional section 9c of the National Industrial Recovery act. It was the first real test of the legitimacy of New Deal legislation and blasted high hopes held out by administration leaders that it would be upheld.

The court ruled that the Executive had been given legislative powers which were uncalled for, that proper rules had not been laid down for his guidance. The section had conferred upon the President the power to prohibit the transportation over state lines of oil which had been produced in excess of state quotas; the power was denied.

Hailed as a victory for the New Deal was the decision (5 to 4) of the Supreme court in upholding the gold clause cases, rendered February 18. While the decision upheld New Deal action of denying the gold payment obligation, the opinions of the justices were in severe cases severe rebukes.

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

In this instance there were three issues at stake. The first resulted from congressional action in setting aside the obligation in private contracts to pay interest or principal in gold, or other specific coin or currency. The action was sustained by the majority of five, who confirmed decisions of lower courts that "congress had power to adopt the joint resolution with respect to these obligations of railroad companies and hence that the gold clause could not be enforced and the bonds were payable in legal tender currency."

From the Court of Claims came the second issue, which involved the holder of a federal gold certificate who claimed that he should be paid according to the terms of the gold obligation or its equivalent. In this case the court simply said that the plaintiff had not been able to show any actual damages, so the Court of Claims had no right to entertain the case in the first place.

Much the same was the third issue, also up from the Court of Claims, involving the holder of a Liberty bond who wanted his payment in gold. And here the court made a peculiar decision. It rather hinted that New Deal legislation was unconstitutional, but refused to do anything about it. The dictums of the court said: "We hold that the joint resolution of June 5, 1933, so far as it attempted to override the obligation of the United States created by the bond in suit, is invalid. It went beyond the constitutional authority of congress. But we hold that the action is for breach of contract and that the plaintiff has failed to show cause of action for actual damages. Hence the court of claims could not entertain the suit."

About the same time a Federal court in Louisville, Ky., denied that the PWA had the right to condemn land for slum clearance. A Cincinnati court did the same. Another court held the lumber code of the NRA unconstitutional. In some states, state courts threw out state recovery acts which were designed to complement the national one.

Labor Relations.

Government power to regulate labor relations anywhere in the country, based on the constitutional statement that congress shall have power to "regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian tribes," was discarded by Judge John Percy Neils in the Federal District court at Wilmington, Del., in Wlerton Steel company case. Another jolt for NRA.

Another blow to NRA labor relations was an injunction granted by Federal District Judge Charles Irvin Dawson at Louisville to 35 soft coal operators, relieving them from the rigors of NRA minimum wage requirements.

Federal District Judge W. I. Grubb in Birmingham took a pot shot at the TVA when he declared that $1,000,000,000 experiment unconstitutional, claiming that the federal government had no right to compete with private business in any state. This was, of course, directed at the "TVA yardstick." It was a New Deal defeat which was turned into a victory when Judge Grubb's decision was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

A shadow of the destruction that was to come to the AAA processing tax was cast when the Supreme court on March 4 voided the plans of the New Deal for stabilization of the milk industry in New York.

In May the Supreme court delivered three death blows to the New Deal. One was the decision which voided the railroad retirement act.

In another case the court put a further crimp in President Roosevelt's power by denying him the right to remove a federal officer from office. The President had sought to remove William E. Humphrey from the Federal Power commission.

And Another Blow.

The third blow, the one that left even Franklin D. Roosevelt speechless (for awhile) was the decision of the Schechter poultry case. The decision was all the more crushing because it was unanimous. In delivering the court's opinion Chief Justice Hughes declared definitely that all of the code-making provisions were an unconstitutional transfer of legislative powers from congress to the President and others who had no constitutional right to them. About the codes, Chief Justice Hughes said:

"... Section 3 (NRA) of the Recovery act is without precedent. It supplies no standards for any trade, industry or activity. It does not undertake to prescribe rules of conduct to be applied to particular states of fact to be determined by appropriate administrative procedure. Instead of prescribing rules of conduct, it authorizes the making of codes to prescribe them.

"... We think that the code-making authority thus prescribed is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power."

About the power of the federal government to regulate local wages and working hours the chief justice said:

"Without in any way disparaging (the administration's) motive, it is enough to say that the recuperative efforts of the federal government must be made in a manner consistent with the authority granted by the Constitution.

"We are of the opinion that the attempt through provisions of the code to fix the hours and wages of employees of defendants in their intrastate business was not a valid exercise of federal power."

Hits Processing Tax.

On July 16 the Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston declared that the processing tax of AAA was an unwarranted use of the taxing power to regulate and restrict cotton production; that it was an unwarranted exercise of federal power to delegate unlimited power to the secretary of agriculture to administer the tax, and that the tax violates the requirement that taxes should be uniform throughout the United States.

It is now believed that the administration will seek to push as many of these test cases through the Supreme court as possible, with the view that if they are there held to be unconstitutional, constitutional amendment to centralize the legislative power of the nation much more than it is now will form the important part of the Democratic platform for 1936. That this is possible might be indicated by the fact that 3,500,000 farmers who have so far received $900,000,000 are directly affected by the AAA ruling. With their families, they might form a very substantial block of votes to change the basic law of the land.

One historian, Charles A. Beard, points out that three times before has the Supreme court "thrown itself resolutely across currents of powerful interests and ideas." Once was in the Dred Scott case, with its aftermath of the Civil war, and later the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments, effecting important changes in the federal system. Another was the court's attempt during and after the Civil war to restrain the President and congress in several decisions; its result was a curtailment of the appellate jurisdiction of the court and an increase in the number of justices from seven to nine (the two new ones to be favorable to the reversal of a decision which the administration wanted reversed, and the court reversed it). On the third time the court in 1893 declared invalid the income tax law of 1894. The decision was reversed by amendment.

Of course there is some question as to whether a parallel can be drawn between these decisions and the recent ones against the New Deal. If such a parallel can be drawn:

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR? My Neighbor

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT
© Western Newspaper Union.

The dictionary gives two distinct-ly different definitions for the word neighbor. "One who dwells near another." "One who lives on friendly terms with another."

These definitions suggest divergent philosophies of life. It is clearly evident that the answer to the question, who is my neighbor, cannot be given in terms of geographical limitations. The man who lives next door may or may not be my neighbor. The mere fact that his house is next to mine does not necessarily make him my neighbor. I may not even know his name and nothing about his family. He may be a complete stranger just as much as though he lived in a foreign land. The answer to the question cannot be made in terms of social or racial distinctions. Whether he be poor or rich, educated or not, has nothing to do with the case. If I have friendly relations with him, he is my neighbor.

What is true of individuals is also true of communities and nations. England has frequently referred to the United States as her neighbor and vice versa. When we accept the answer, "One with whom we have friendly relations," we find a possible solution for many of the problems confronting us in our present changing social order. When neighbors are friendly together they understand one another. Much of the confusion and difficulty today is due to misunderstanding. In a recent biography of Herbert Hoover reference is made to his frequent use of the transatlantic telephone. The writer remarks—aside—that if the telephone could have been used instead of communicating with foreign powers by means of written messages, the last war would not have occurred.

This answer to the question suggests one way out of our social and economic ills. Our difficulty today is that we lack confidence. We are not willing to trust one another. One nation is suspicious of another. They are not on "friendly terms." They are not neighbors. Until they become such we can have no hope for international peace, compacts and courts notwithstanding. Labor disputes are settled on a basis of mutual understanding, so should it be with all disagreements whether between individuals, communities or nations. Long ago Walter Scott wrote "The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other."

No party or individual can live happily or successfully alone. What occurs in Europe vitally affects America. What happens to my neighbor affects me. Who is my neighbor? The one with whom there is a mutual understanding provocative of peace and good will.

A cactus buck is a steer of the deer family. His name originates in a popular superstition that his plight is the result of inadvertent contact, in fawahood, with some of the bristling growth of the southwestern ranges.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

From the time of your early childhood you are always engaged in some kind of a competition.

Competition If you have brothers and sisters, you learn early to compete with them for things that you want. As you grow older, you begin to compete for a job in life.

After that, if it is a good job, you have to compete with others in order to hold it.

Now if you are going to get what you want out of existence you have got to work against others.

Many of these "others" are people you never have seen, and never will see.

But they are trying to do what you want to do, which is to gain some of the prizes of existence.

Thomas A. Edison was not the only man who was thinking about the new unseen magic fluid called electricity after men found out that there was such a thing.

But he was the first man to realize its future possibilities, and to experiment with them.

The Wright brothers were not the first people to believe that flight was possible.

Many men had done that. Professor Langley built a plane long before they did. He would have flown it if the gasoline engine had been perfected in his day.

To show how right he was in his belief, after his death other aeronauts took his plane, equipped it with a gasoline motor and flew it.

Today men in America, in England, in France and many other countries are all working to develop machinery of all sorts, and from time to time the announcement comes through the newspapers that one of them has succeeded.

Remember as you work at your job that while you are doing it, other people whom you have never known, and whose existence you never have suspected are doing much the same thing, and are matching their wits against yours.

If life were not organized in that way there would be very little progress.

It is likely that we would be still rolling around in ox carts, or sailing in junks as many of the Chinese do still.

It is this battle, this competition that puts men on their mettle and enables them eventually to do things of the greatest importance.

I know it is fashionable to sneer at the "speakies."

But, since there is no way to put an end to them—and oughtn't to—why not make the most of them?

It is true that some of them are cheap melodrama.

Mice do not like the odor of peppermint. Place a little oil of peppermint where mice are found.

A teaspoonful of salt and a dessert spoonful of lemon juice makes salts of lemon used for removing iron rust from white clothing.

Butter the top of bread or rolls before putting into the oven instead of after taking out of oven. Crust will be much softer.

Five pounds of dusting sulphur and one package of green dye for cottons makes one pint of green sulphur dust. Add water of sulphur, then, dye and set in sun to dry. The green dust is not so unsightly as the yellow when sprinkled on plants.

But even in these, people who would otherwise lead very drab lives, find real enjoyment.

And to the thousands of people who live in little country towns, where the chief occupation used to be to go down to the depot and see the train come in, they have been a positive blessing.

The people of a back woods town no longer gaze at high buildings when they come to a city. They have seen them in the "speakies."

They have seen important men and women from many parts of the world, and moreover they have heard them talk.

They have had an opportunity to see the world's best plays, which are often staged with an elaborateness and a fidelity to truth that would not be possible in the ordinary three or four-act drama.

The kind of person called "hick" has ceased to exist since the films were made to talk.

I admit that some of the films are stupid and some of them are bad, but just the same they are, next to the newspapers, a fine means of promoting general knowledge, not only of one's own country but of practically all the countries in the world.

I, who in the course of my life had only seen one iceberg, saw at least a hundred of them on the screen.

I have seen European capitals and "Africa's Burning Sands" and the Russian steppes and the pyramids in Egypt.

I have seen the Amazon and the Volga, and the Tower of London, and the Place de Bastille in Paris. With the exception of the two latter I would have had no idea of the appearance of any of these.

For the people who live in the lonely forests and on the wide plains the "speakies" are a blessing.

Some of the melodrama in them might be easily eliminated.

Some of the sexy ones could be cleaned up without doing any harm.

But as a whole they have been a great benefit, and will become more useful and more valuable to the people of the world as time takes its way.

The Five-Mile Act

The five-mile act was an act known as the Clarendon or Oxford act passed by parliament in 1603. It prohibited any clergyman ejected from his living in 1602 by the enactment of the act of uniformity from approaching nearer than five miles of any town, city, or parish where he formerly preached. The penalty for disobedience was 40 pounds. It was a severe blow to the Puritans.

SHEEP BREEDING ONE OF NATION'S BIG INDUSTRIES

The growth of the wool industry in the United States has been phenomenal, says the National Geographic Magazine. Two years after Capt. John Smith and his followers landed on the Virginia coast the first sheep were introduced into America at their settlement. Twenty-one years later a shipment of the fleecy animals from Europe was landed on the Massachusetts coast. Indians' appetites, predatory animals and severe winters made serious inroads on the Colonial flocks, so most of the animals were kept inside town walls, on islands and on peninsulas fenced off from the mainland. While Indians no longer are a menace to wool growers, predatory animals, parasites and poisonous plants still cause great losses to the industry.

As cotton clothed those of the South, wool clothed those of the North. Private homes then were America's woolen factories. The American wool trade began when sheep-owning families exchanged their wool and surplus homespun for other commodities. With the increase in Colonial population the demand for wool cloth rose and the federal government as well as local governments encouraged wool-growing.

By 1810, just two centuries after the first sheep arrived from England, there were 7,000,000 sheep grazing over the settled area of eastern United States. Four years later there were 10,000,000. About this time foreign wool flooded the United States, markets and the wool industry was as hard-hit as other industries in the panic of 1810.

As large American cities and towns took form, demand for homespuns waned and factory-made wools took their place. Prices paid for wool by manufacturers encouraged sheep raising so that by 1840 the range of the animals had spread from the Atlantic to every state east of the Mississippi, as well as to Missouri and Louisiana.

With the western migration in the middle of the last century went sheep. By 1800, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Arkansas, Texas, California and the areas that now are Oregon and Arizona, joined the wool-growing regions.

Throng to Shrines

Healing shrines, many of them steeped in traditions hundreds of years old and containing religious treasures of inestimable worth, are the objectives for thousands of pilgrims visiting Quebec. Religious leaders estimate that nearly 3,000,000 worshippers visit the shrines annually.

Boxer Good Watch Dog, Approaching Dane in Size

The Boxer is another "made in Germany" dog. Like the Doberman Pinscher, the German Shepherd and the Reissen Schnauzer, the Boxer was bred and developed as a police dog and watch dog, says a writer in the Washington Star.

With his heavy, powerful body, approaching in size that of the Great Dane, and his bulldog-like head, he is a tough-looking customer.

His ancestry, the bulldog and the bull terrier, would indicate that he could be depended on in a fight. But the same ancestry is good indication, too, that he is a loving, faithful guardian for his master and his friends.

In color, the Boxer generally is fawn or brindle. His body is compact, powerful and yet graceful in outline. His legs are straight and strong looking. His feet are catlike. His head is square, with domed skull and strong muzzle. He does not have as much lay back as the bulldog, but his muzzle is shorter than that of the bull terrier. His ears are erect.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Saladine listens to the history of neighboring Hostile Valley, with gossip of the mysterious, enticing "Huldy," wife of Will Ferrin. Interested, he drives to the Valley for a day's fishing, though admitting to himself his chief desire is to see the reputedly glamorous Huldy. "Old Marm" Pierce and her nineteen-year-old granddaughter Jenny live in the Valley. Since little more than a child Jenny has at first admired and then deeply loved young Will Ferrin, neighboring farmer, older than she, and who regards her still as merely a child. Will takes employment in nearby Augusta. Jenny is disconsolate. Bart Carey, something of a ne'er-do-well, is attracted by Jenny, but the girl repulses him. Learning that Will is coming home, Jenny, exulting, sets his long-empty house "to rights," and has dinner ready for him. He comes—bringing his wife, Huldy. The girl's world collapses. Huldy becomes the subject of unfavorable gossip in the Valley. Entering his home, unlooked for, Will finds seemingly damning evidence of his wife's unfaithfulness, as a man who he knows is Seth Humphreys breaks from the house. Will overtakes him, and chokes him to death, though Humphreys shatters his leg, with a bullet. At Marm Pierce's house the leg is amputated. Jenny goes to break the news to Huldy. She finds Bart Carey with the woman. When he leaves Huldy makes a mock of Jenny's sympathy, declaring she has no use for "half a man," and is leaving at once. Will is legally exonerated, and with a home-made artificial leg "carries on."

But when the frost was out of the ground and plowing to be done, the handicap under which Will must labor began more fully to appear. He was able to do the barn chores; but field work presented problems hard to solve. Bart and others helped him when they could; but Will's restless zeal sought an outlet in great works about the farm, and the neighbor folk had their own tasks to do.

For this problem which Will faced, chance brought what seemed a fortunate solution. Toward the foot of the Valley there was a farm long owned by old Fred Dace, whose father and grandfather had dwelt there before him, and who lived there with his son, Nate. But Nate had died a year or two before; and this spring the old man likewise sickened and came to his quick end. He had no kin about, but there was a son who four or five years before had gone west, and this son now came home.

Zeke Dace was a lean, wiry man in his middle twenties, who wore a wide-brimmed hat of a western pattern, and rode plow horses with a stock saddle, and rolled cigarettes with one hand, and had a laughing, ready tongue. He had come home, he said, to stay. The cow business was busted, jobs on the range were hard to find.

But the Dace farm promised no great return from even a vigorous cultivation; and Will Ferrin sent for Zeke and hired him as a hand. Jenny approved the arrangement. She liked the newcomer; and he and Will were from the first a congenial pair.

There were others who liked Zeke, too. Amy, Bart's sister, was one of them. She was older than Jenny, but not yet old enough to begin to fade in that quick, relentless fashion which hard farm work may impose upon a woman. Since Huldy's departure, whether by accident or not, Bart had fewer boarders; and Seth Humphreys' steam mill was shut down abandoned and deserted now. So Bart and Amy were much alone, and Bart went often for a word with Will, and Zeke as often came down the hill to stand in the door of Amy's kitchen and talk with her a while. He had a teasing, laughing tongue that could whip color to her cheeks; but she liked it, and she sometimes nursed happy dreams.

So this early summer in the Valley passed serenely; and Jenny was a part of this serenity. She had no least warning of what was to come.

It was mid-July when Huldy returned. Zeke and Will were busy with the harvest. Will could drive the mowing machine, or the rake; and when it came to load the hay cart, or to put the hay in the mow, he called a board across the foot of his peg leg to make a sort of snow-shoe which enabled him to stand securely. Jenny had gone this day early to the farm; had helped for a while in the fields, pitching hay up on the cart with Zeke while Will stowed it there.

But later she went to the house to get dinner ready for them; and at a convenient time they came stamping into the kitchen, washed themselves at the sink and so sat down. Jenny served them, set the heaping dishes on the table, then seated herself to eat with them; and the three were laughing together at some word Zeke had said, when a car drove into the yard.

A car with a man at the wheel and Huldy by his side.

They saw her through the open door; saw her, and sat still and frozen while she descended and came toward them. The man stayed in the car.

Jenny thought that Huldy was as beautiful as ever. She found herself on her feet, facing the door. Will half turned in his chair as though to rise; but that board nailed across the end of his peg cramped under a rung of the chair, and prevented. Zeke looked questioningly at Will, and then at Huldy; and Huldy stood smiling, in the doorway.

Then she laughed. "I see you ain't lonely, Will!" she said. He tried again to get up. "Where's your crutch?" she inquired derisively. "Want me to fetch it for you?"

Jenny asked: "What have you come for?" Her tone was steady, her heart still.

"Don't worry," Huldy told her. "I don't aim to stay. I left some clothes here; come to fetch them. Unless you've been wearing them!"

"They're in a box in the attic," Jenny said, ignoring the taunt. "I put them away."

"Moved in, have you?" Huldy commented. "Seems like you was in quite a hurry. I waited till he married me, anyway!"

Jenny's cheek was white; yet she curbed her tongue, and Huldy turned to Zeke. "I don't know you," she said amiably. "But you look like you had sense enough to realize three's a crowd!"

Will wrenched the board off the end of his leg, with a squeak of drawn nails, freeing his foot. He stood up to face her. "Huldy," he said huskily, "you mind your tongue. Come in if you want. You're always welcome here. But mind your tongue."

Huldy was for the moment silenced; but Zeke spoke to Jenny. "Where's this box?" he asked scornfully. "I'll fetch it down for her."

"In the attic, the far end," Jenny said. "By the window."

Zeke turned toward the attic stairs, behind the stove; but Huldy spoke to him. "You're in an awful hurry to get rid of me," she protested.

Zeke hesitated, looked at Will. "I'll pack her back in the car out there if you say, Will," he offered, his cheek hot.

Huldy whispered mockingly: "I guess you don't like me at all!"

"Not a bit, lady," Zeke assured her. "Nor any of your kind."

"How do you know my kind?" she challenged.

"I've seen enough of 'em, in gutters and around," he said mercilessly.

But Will turned upon him. "Zeke, you hush up," he said. Then to his wife: "Huldy, he'll fetch your things!"

Huldy stood, leaning indolently against the jamb of the door, smiling at them all. "He don't have to hurry. I might decide to stay," she said softly.

No one spoke; but Jenny felt the blood drain out of her lips.

"I like handsome men," said Huldy, drawing. "And even if he don't like me, he's handsome as they come!"

Zeke's eyes were black with anger. She laughed at his rage, and she said in soft tones: "You can see he don't like me, Will. I'll have to make him like me before I go."

Zeke cried, in choking exasperation: "You've got one man outside! How many..."

Huldy looked over her shoulder, then back to Zeke again. "You go out and tell him he can go," she said. "Tell him I'm through with him!" And when he hesitated: "He's just a little man," she urged, derisively cajoling. "You've no call to be afraid!"

Zeke appealed to Will with a glance; and Will spoke wearily. "Go ahead, Zeke," he said, submitting. "This here's Huldy's home, if she's a mind to stay."

Huldy took off her hat and laid it aside; she touched her hair with her hands. Jenny stood up and moved toward the door; but Huldy said softly: "Don't you go! There's room enough for both of us. I don't want your Will!"

Will protested heavily: "Huldy, if you stay here, you'll have to mend your ways!"

Huldy was suddenly vicious, dangerous. "Don't talk to me!" she retorted. "After fetching her in here the minute I was gone. I aim to stay; and if you try to boss me around, I'll howl her name up and down the Valley till people hold their noses when they see her! You better mend your own ways, Will Ferrin!"

Zeke touched Will's arm. "Let me throw her out, Will," he protested. "Don't you go and take her in."

"I have to, Zeke," Will confessed. Zeke stared at the other man, hot, scornful, furious. "All right," he said then contemptuously. "If you're that kind, I'm quitting! You'll have to get on without me!"

But Huldy moved slowly to Zeke's side. "Don't you quit," she said, and touched his hand. "You'll be glad you stayed."

Zeke seemed choking; he said at last, grudgingly: "I'll finish out the week, I reckon."

And Huldy smiled contentedly; but Jenny could bear no more. Moving slowly, she went out through the shed and the barn and down the orchard path to the brook; she came through the deep woods home. As she opened the kitchen door, Marm Pierce looked up inquiringly. And then, in quick alarm at what she saw, she rose to her feet; but there was no need of a question. Jenny spoke.

"Huldy's back," she said through trembling lips. "She's come home!" Marm Pierce exclaimed, in quick reassurance: "Don't you grieve. Jenny! She'll never stay!"

Jenny shook her head, almost smiling, pitifully. "She didn't aim to. She just come to fetch her clothes," she said. "But she saw Zeke Dace. And—now she's going to stay!"

From Huldy's return until Jim Saladine came at last to Hostile Valley, two years intervened; and during this period, though her heart was his forever, Jenny saw Will not at all. In the country as in the city, it is possible to go for years without glimpsing your next-door neighbor. Accident might have brought them face to face; but neither the girl nor Will would design an encounter. Jenny loved him deeply and completely; and the very fact that they did not see one another served in some fashion to intensify the girl's devotion. This love of hers for Will, springing out of the years of her childhood, growing in stature and in depth as she became a woman, seemed to feed on denial. Lacking the man himself, she kept his remembered image in her heart and was wistfully contented so.

In the weeks after Huldy's return, Amy Carey fell more and more into the habit of coming through the woods to see the old woman and the girl who dwelt here in this house divided. Win Haven's side of the house fell nowadays more and more into disrepair. It would not be long, unless measures of repair were taken, till that half of the house sagged weakly downward into a collapsed ruin. Once Jenny proposed taking tar paper and like material to proof the other side of the walls against moisture; but the old woman would not consent.

"I wouldn't give Win the satisfaction," she declared.

When Amy came to stop a while with these two, in the warm kitchen, she could not fail to remark the increasing disrepair; and she urged Marm Pierce to take measures of prevention.

"You'll have to," she said. "Because Win won't never do anything. He was to our house the other night, and talked about it; and he

"I Might Decide to Stay," She Said Softly.

lows to be 'round when his side of the house falls, and to watch and see the trouble it makes for you."

"He around again, is he?" Marm Pierce demanded tartly. "I didn't know but he'd died in a gutter somewhere before now."

"He comes to our place right along," Amy assured them. "There's a new steam mill putting in down brook below here, opposite where Seth's mill used to be. They come in from Liberty village. Win, he's working there. He comes up and him and Bart set and drink and brag." She added huskily: "Win, he's shining up to Huldy, too."

"That old fool!" Marm Pierce exclaimed. "You can't go to blame him," Amy said ruefully. "Seems like she takes a kind of satisfaction in fretting a man, and getting him haired up, and laughing at him after." And she said slowly: "But I don't know as she's bothering with anyone, only Zeke, now."

Jenny caught some accent in the girl's tone. Her perceptions were perhaps quickened by her own love for Will; but Marm Pierce, in this matter not so wise, said sharply: "Zeke's as big a fool as any of them. I loved he had more sense than that."

"Zeke's all right," Amy said, in humble defense. "Only he, his eyes filled with slow tears. He used to come down to set with me," she confessed. "Always joking and laughing, he was Zeke's a hand to make a joke out of things. But I ain't seen him lately."

So Marm Pierce understood, and her lips set in anger. "I'd like to give that hussy a piece of my mind!" she cried impotently.

Amy whispered: "Sometimes I'm scared!" she shivered uneasily. "Dunno what I'm scared of, either. But the men that have seen her, sometimes they come down to our place; and they're half crazy, kind of. Bart, he hates the sight of her. He can't say anything hard enough of her. He's always been a good friend to Will, and to have her treat Will so frets Bart awful. And Win Haven, he'll come down and cuss and rave and rant about her, like he wanted to twist her neck. But Zeke, he don't ever come down!"

"Nor Will?" Jenny guessed.

"Will, he stays up there," Amy asserted. "Him and Zeke." The girl shuddered. "I dunno what's going to come of it," she admitted, fearfully.

And she said: "Bart talks about licking Zeke. He says somebody'd ought to, long as Will can't do himself."

Marm Pierce asked sharply: "Can't Will take a gun to him, or a cart stove? If he had any gumption in him..."

"Will's got gumption enough," Amy assured them. She looked at Jenny. "Bart told me, here about a week ago, he was up there, and Huldy said something about you, Jenny. Will, most times, he's gentle to her; but Bart says Will he got up at that and he says to her: 'Huldy,' he says. 'You keep your tongue off Jenny or I'll rip it out of your mouth!'"

Jenny felt a fierce surge of pride and happiness; but she hid her eyes, so that these others might not see. Marm Pierce exclaimed in a deep exasperation:

"I sh'd think as much! What'd she say to that?"

"She shut her mouth!" Amy reported. "Bart said she kind of laughed, but she did hush up! He said Will was enough to terrify a body, the way he looked at her." And she reflected: "Will, if he does get mad, it don't pay to fool with him."

There were other days when Amy came thus to be with them. They were remote from the Ferrin farm; but Amy was not. From Will's place down to Carey bridge was a scant quarter mile; so Amy had almost daily word of what passed on the hill, and her deep trouble increased.

"It's like a sore place, up there," she said one day. "Like a sore that's bound to spread if you don't scrub it out, and burn it out." And she cried: "There's times I'd like to! Even Bart, he ain't the same, with that woman on his mind all the time." She shook her head. "Seems like they all hate Huldy," she confessed. "But they can't seem to stay away from her. I'm scared, Marm Pierce. It wouldn't surprise me a mite if a crowd of them went up there some day and rode her right out of the valley!"

"Good enough for her!" the old woman declared. "I wish't they would!"

But this did not happen, and after a time Bart was forced to cease his visits to Will's farm. One day Amy came running to fetch Marm Pierce.

"Bart's hurt awful!" she cried. "Zeke beat him pretty near to death. You've got to come and take care of him."

"Hurt how?" the old woman questioned, already preparing to obey this summons.

"They had a fight," Amy panted. "I was in the house, and I heard them, and ran out, and they was at it, down by the bridge, fighting and rolling around in the ditch, and getting up and scrabbling at each other and going down again. The kep' at it, till Zeke he had the be of it. Backed off finally and Bart laying there in the road."

Baluchistan

Fruit Stall in Quetta, Baluchistan.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Indian province of Baluchistan lost its most important city in the recent earthquake that destroyed Quetta.

Quetta, the capital of Baluchistan and the only municipality in the province, existed primarily for military purposes, but the Pax Britannica, substitute for the lawlessness and banditry of former days, had made an important civil community and trading center of it as well.

Baluchistan is India's fortress to the east, and Quetta was its donjon keep. The British have been in control of the place since 1877, and since 1883 have held it under perpetual lease from its old ruler, the picturesque named Wali of Kalat. When the British went to Quetta was only a little group of mud huts surrounded by unhealthy plains that were virtually swamps. Drainage and sanitation made the place over. The population increased to 60,000, and once swampy lowlands furnished a setting for villas and farm houses surrounded by orchards and planted groves.

Western influence had permeated Quetta and the standard of living had risen accordingly. Tea, a little while ago a marked luxury, was becoming a common beverage. Leather footwear had displaced sandals to a noticeable degree.

Hot Days, Cold Nights.

Quetta is in the same latitude as Cairo, Jacksonville, Fla., and Shanghai, but because of its 6,000 feet of altitude and the physical aspect of the mountainous country, its climate is very different. Each day the mercury goes up and down through a wide range. The difference between daily maximum and minimum has been known to reach 50 degrees; but such excessive changes are confined to certain short seasons. The hills and even the valleys of Baluchistan are largely treeless, and when the sun is down heat radiates away rapidly. As a consequence the nights are always cool, even when the sun blisters one by day.

The area devastated by the earthquake extends south of Quetta into the state of Kalat, a vast mountain-streaked region of Baluchistan, where modern progress has hardly penetrated.

Kalat is sparsely settled. The state is nearly as large as Nebraska but it has only twice as many inhabitants as the city of Omaha. Small villages are scattered on the hills and in the valleys and there are a dozen fairly sized towns, but no large cities in the American sense. Kalat, the capital, was a cluster of mud houses and mud-ting huts climbing a hill topped with the mud-walled, fortresslike citadel of the Khan. Much of it was destroyed by the earthquake.

The inhabitants of Kalat are divided into tribes, each with a chief. Many of the tribes graze sheep and herd goats, following their animals wherever there is fresh pasture. Some of them live the year round in matting or cloth-covered huts; others refuse to be burdened with cargo when on the move and build new brushwood huts at each stop.

Farming and Fishing.

Here and there farmers have built crude irrigation works that are fed by springs and small streams, but more often the native cultivators depend upon floods to water and fertilize their soil.

Along the coast hundreds of small, clumsy fishing boats operate in the Arabian sea fisheries. The fish are salted and form one of the leading articles of Kalat commerce.

There are no organized industries in the state. Every native woman is an expert with the needle and she makes all the family clothing. Wool and goat hair from domestic animals are her working materials and what she does not use finds its way to Peshawar, the leading Kalat port, destined to foreign markets. A peep through the door of a native hut may also reveal a pottery factory, but only a small quantity of the homemade product is sold beyond the Kalat borders.

Just across the Baluchistan border, in the province of Sind, is the seaport of Karachi which has been crowded with refugees from the earthquake districts. Like Marseilles, near the mouth of the Rhone, and Alexandria, near the mouth of the Nile, Karachi is of a great river, but not on it. It is just off the delta of the Indus; but its importance is largely a gift from that stream, whose shifting alluvium has swallowed up its rivals.

Tatta, an old capital of Sind, as Karachi is today, was on a deep-water branch of the Indus, a short distance above its mouth. It flourished until the river left it high and dry. Shahbandar, a more famous Sind port on another Indus branch, could, like New Orleans, be reached by deep-draught men-of-war. But about 1725 Shahbandar also became silted up and is now only an inland village. Common sense dictated the choice of a port outside the shifting delta, and Karachi, in a sheltered bay a short distance to the west, began to grow in importance.

Many millions of dollars have been spent on the harbor of Karachi in the construction of moles, jetties and other port works. Keeping its waters deep enough is a never ending fight. A strong ocean current sweeps to the entrance part of the tremendous load of silt brought down by the Indus, and this must be continually dredged away that Karachi may not suffer a fate like lands, where gallop many herds of that which overtook Tatta and Shahbandar.

The Beaufort Sea

The Beaufort sea is that part of the Arctic sea that lies between Alaska and the Canadian Arctic islands. It is generally covered with drifting ice and many parts are unexplored.

Little Chance Now to Develop Famous Apple

Our wild apple years are over. The produce of well-conducted orchards is uniform and shapely, and every autumn our markets show the same varieties—Jonathan, Winesap, Wealthy, Gravenstein, McIntosh, Baldwin and Ben Davis, of course; fewer and fewer Spys. There is no uncertainty about the kinds, only about the crop. Excitement in fruits comes from far lands nowadays, with pineapples and zapotes arriving by air and the Orient sending juubes and satiny persimmons. But through out the century before this one, unforeseen apples lent a thrill to every harvest time. The air of the orchard tingled with surprises.

It was the hope of most farm lads then to discover or develop an apple so excellent that it should make father's fortune. Along the always mysterious edges of fallow fields, up among the cedars in the woodlot there might be growing a little wild or strayed apple, delicious beyond imagination, unknown to the world and waiting to be named and glorified. The end of the Eighteenth century and the beginning of the Nineteenth were the apple's age of discovery and invention. The monuments to the Northern Spy, the Baldwin, the McIntosh, the Wealthy, the "marvelous primate apple—God's earth is full of love to man"—all date from those adventurous years. Nothing seemed too wonderful for the young orchards, which already had been blessed by so many lucky windfalls whose fruit had multiplied as in a Scriptural miracle by grafting. How rose that spontaneous variation, the solitary first tree destined to bear millions of offspring to be called by its name? The tree whose like you yourself might come upon tomorrow as good as gold—another Tompkins King, or Smoke-house, or Esopus Spitzenberg? An unknown Rome Beauty or Delicious! In that rich period of experiment farmers gleefully bought acres of many named saplings, and winter cellars were not big enough to hold ment when Whitefoot had come to his rescue. Whitefoot listened without saying a word until Danny's story was ended. Then he gravely shook his head.

"It was a crazy thing to do,

Cousin Danny. It certainly was a crazy thing to do," said he.

"What was a crazy thing to do?" demanded Danny, looking puzzled. "Going so far away from home when there was no need of it," replied Whitefoot. "I thought you were too wise to take such foolish risks. At your age you should know better. It might be excusable in a youngster with no family to think of, but one of your age should have known better."

"I guess you are right, Cousin Whitefoot," replied Danny meekly. "I've learned a lesson I'll never forget. I've had frights enough to last me all the rest of my life and if I ever get home I'll never leave it again. I guess I ought to be starting along right now."

"I guess you ought to do nothing of the sort," retorted Whitefoot promptly. "The thing for you to do now is to rest and get yourself in condition."

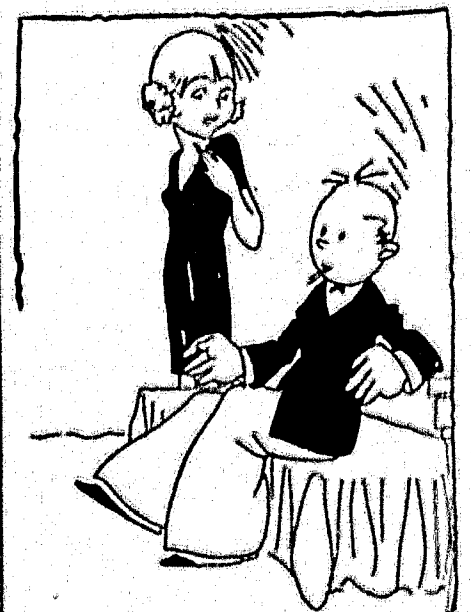

Danny sighed. "I don't know but what you are right, Cousin Whitefoot," said he. "I really don't feel as if I could face danger again this night. My nerves are rather upset. This is a very nice, comfortable place you have here. It is one of the most comfortable places I've been in for a great while."

Whitefoot looked pleased. "I'm glad you like it," said he. "I think it is rather good myself. I have two or three other places quite as good. Now the thing for you to do, Cousin Danny, is to stay here the rest of the night and make yourself right at home."

To this Danny agreed, for he really did not feel equal to going any farther that night. So he and Whitefoot slept a little and talked a great deal. Danny learned many things about the Green Forest and in turn told Whitefoot many things about the Green Meadows. Whitefoot was sure that the Green Forest was the finest place in all the Great World in which to live. Danny was sure that it didn't compare with the Green Meadows, and they argued the matter over and over. But the argument was quite good-natured and simply showed that the things one is used to are the things one loves best. To Danny the Green Forest was filled with terrible dangers. To Whitefoot the Green Meadows seemed a place where there could be no such thing as real safety. So they argued and argued and had a perfectly splendid time.

Baby, Per Pound!
 A mother in Bursa, Turkey, has filed a claim in court, demanding the return of her baby, which had been sold by the father. The couple separated several months ago, the father taking charge of their six month-old offspring. The mother went to work in a neighboring village, and immediately after her departure the father sold the babe—at so much a pound—receiving about $1 for it. When the mother returned to Bursa she offered to buy back the little one at a much higher price than the buyer had paid. The buyer refused, and the mother promptly sued.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES • By JEAN NEWTON

WHEN THE DEVIL INVENTED WORRY

"FROM the loss of a tooth to that of a mistress, there's no pang that is not bearable. The apprehension is much more cruel than the certainty; and we make up our minds to the misfortune when 'tis irremediable, part with the tormentor, and mumble our crust on t'other side of the jaws."

In that bit of philosophy from Thackeray is one of the strongest indictments ever written on the subject of worry; and its foolishness and uselessness.

True, eating on the other side of the jaw is not nearly so bad as the anticipation of it, as worrying about having to do it! Out of fear of violence from my readers I shall not mention the fact that the necessity to eat in even a little corner of the jaw could not possibly be so destructive of health and nerves as worrying about it. Oh, no, I wouldn't mention that. My readers know it. It's Thackeray's point that it isn't even so unpleasant as thinking about it in advance—that is new!

Can we improve on Thackeray? No, but we can add this thought, that while it's silly enough to lose sleep worrying about a tooth that's got to come out anyway, it's absolutely insane to worry about losing a tooth that after all may never have to come out!

And that's the heaviest burden of most of our worries, isn't it—the misfortunes that never do occur! That's what worry is for, isn't it?—that's what the devil invented it for—to give us bald heads and acid stomachs and lined faces and jumpy nerves over something that never does happen!

Freshening Hats

An excellent way to freshen up a felt hat, when it has become dusty and limp, is to give it a good brushing with a stiff brush to remove all top dust. Then, with another stiff brush dipped in a good cleansing fluid, go all over the hat, including the band, until all is quite damp. Stuff the crown with paper, pressing any necessary creases in place, and set brim down on a flat surface until dry.

Puff Sleeves

The popular puff sleeves are most difficult to iron unless stretched out plain and free from their puffs. One housewife has solved this problem by fastening the elastic with a tiny safety pin. She then removes the elastic before laundering the dress and has a plain straight sleeve to deal with.

Clips in New Guise

Clips are out in new guises. Some are made of smoothly polished brown wood cut on planes as mathematical as a pyramid and set with colored glass stones.

Beauty Hint

Keep your skin scrupulously clean during the hot weather. Pores are apt to clog from the frequent applications of powder, and roughened, coarse skin will result.

HITS FORESTRY TEACHING

Forest schools in the United States have in the past given too much attention to textbook forestry based on European experience, with too little attention to American forestry methods and practices, writes Charles Lathrop Pack in the Review of Reviews.

Forest school teachers should spend at least three months every year at work in the woods, so that they may be better fitted to teach practical forestry in their school rooms. Also, forestry students should be worked in the woods two or three months during each year of their forestry course. Forestry schools should aim to turn out men much better grounded in economic factors which affect the lumber industry. In fact, there should be fewer and better forest schools. Some of them are now inefficient and poorly staffed, according to Pack.

WHY

Refusal to Pay Trifling Tax Made Berlin Capital.

If the inhabitants of Tanager munde, Germany, on the Elbe, had not refused 150 years ago to pay a trifling beer tax, Tanager munde and not Berlin might well have become Germany's capital. In 1480 Elector Albrecht, of Brandenburg, known as Albrecht Achilles because of his great bodily strength and combativeness, introduced a tax of 12 pfennings a tun on beer. Stendal, Grunow, and Tanager munde, all three towns widely known for their excellent brew, refused to pay the tax, and the inhabitants of Tanager munde went so far as to fire on the Elector's suite as it was approaching the city castle. Albrecht subdued the recalcitrants by force of arms.

Eight years later, in the reign of Elector Johann, Albrecht's son known as Johann Cicero and also as Cicero Germanicus because of his profound Latin scholarship, the Tanager munde again revolted against the beer tax. The Elector instead of subjugating the town by force, inflicted a much severer punishment by transferring his capital with entire entourage, administration and courts, to Berlin-Cölln, an unimportant fishing village of some 2,000 inhabitants on the Spree. Thus Berlin became the capital of Brandenburg, then of Prussia, and finally of the German empire—all for the sake of 12 pfennings a tun on beer, of which, moreover, 4 pfennings had gone to Tanager munde.

Why Football Field Is 'Gridiron'
A gridiron is a grated utensil on which food is broiled over a fire. Hence, figuratively, any network of pipes, railway tracks, etc., is called a gridiron. The term is applied to a football field because it is traversed by white lines, which produce a gridiron effect.

STAR DUST

MOVIE AND RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

THE very first rumors of Ernst Lubitsch's sentimental interest in Vivian Gaye got the entire movie industry all excited. It has been reported so often that he was going to marry again that the old-timers were beginning to be skeptical, but this attachment looked serious from the start.

Miss Gaye, you'll remember, is the pretty girl who first bobbed up, some years ago, with Sari Maritza; she was secretary, or something like that. Then she became an actors' agent, and did very well indeed.

Randolph Scott's success was credited to her, and surely you'll remember all the talk when he and she and Virginia Cherrill and Cary Grant all discussed wedding plans. There was a lot of talk about when and where the two sets of fiancées and fiancés would be married. Grant and Miss Cherrill stepped off in England—and later stepped back again in this country—and Scott took Miss Gaye to visit his parents in the South, and then, later, the engagement was broken.

"And I wonder just how good his chances with Paramount will be if Vivian marries Lubitsch," remarked one hard-boiled movie maker when those first rumors broke.

One of New York's maddest milliners held a showing the other day of the new fall modes in hats. As a result, you may hear of a new discovery in movies, soon.

Anna May Wong went to the showing. So did Sylvia Sydney. One of the models didn't appear, and at the last minute a girl named Katherine Leaming, the milliner's reception clerk, had to step in and fill the gap.

She looks like Julia Haydon, and was so charming that she was the hit of the show. News of things like that gets around fast in movie-dom, and with new faces always in demand she'll probably be snapped up to make pictures in a hurry.

Victor McLaglen certainly got a break when he did "The Informer." It's put him right back where he was after "What Price Glory." Everybody wants him, but he's signed with Twentieth Century—the up and coming company of the moment—on a long term contract, and he will have one of those sure-fire Damon Runyon stories as his first one. It will be called—probably—"Professional Soldier."

Dick Powell is making pictures so fast that he seems always to be just starting a new one. He's negotiating a double chin along with a lot of success.

James Milton, who used to be one of The Revelers when his life was devoted to broadcasting, is now all set to make movies. He started some time ago with shorts, and now he's going to appear in a long one, "Radio Jamboree." Here's hoping he returns to the air; his voice was one of the loveliest of those that keep people home at nights to listen to the radio.

He worked his way through college in the South, and at one time played in an orchestra in Little Rock, Ark., in which Dick Powell also worked. He made his debut in New York as a member of Roxy's Gang, and went right on to bigger and better things from there.

At last Charlie Chaplin has named that new picture—or so it's said. According to the latest reports, he will call it "Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times."

Mary Pickford, arriving recently in New York on business connected with United Artists, announced that she was married to a picture company, which made a very exacting husband. But a lot of people think that as soon as her divorce from Douglas Fairbanks becomes final she'll become Mrs. Buddy Rogers.

Will Rogers certainly likes excitement, and his motion picture bosses wish he didn't. Now he wants to go with Willy Post on Post's flight around the world, and since he's one of the topnotchers at the box offices in theaters where his pictures are shown, the makers of those pictures would like it a lot better if he'd stay quietly at home.

Myrna Loy's quarrel with Metro is likely to bring good luck to Rosalind Russell, who has been slowly working her way toward the top. She looks a good deal like Myrna Loy, and has done very well indeed with the minor roles entrusted to her. Now she is to get bigger ones.

And the Loy-Metro quarrel was also a help to Luise Rainer, who got the Loy role in "Escapade," opposite William Powell, when the exotic Myrna left the picture flat. That's one of the pictures that you must see, if only to be able to remark later that you saw Rainer in her first big American picture.

Meanwhile the battle between Metro and one of its best screen bets is still on. Miss Loy gets star billing and wants the salary she feels should go with it. The executives can't see things her way.

"China Seas" is one of those pictures that you'll simply have to see. It's great, and Jean Harlow startles those who've always thought she couldn't act by giving an excellent performance.

Odds and Ends . . . Karloff is going to do "Bluebeard" for Universal . . . Henry Fonda has signed a five-year contract with Walter Wanger . . . Nelson Eddy will have the hero's role in the new movie version of "Rose Marie," which Joan Crawford did as a silent long ago . . . Shirley Temple is taking a vacation in Honolulu before she starts on "Captain January" . . . And Jane Withers, since her picture, "Ginger," was released, is likely to become a menace to the Temple popularity . . . Greerich, Conn., is the second wealthiest town of its size in the country, but the millionaires fairly break their necks to get to the local movie house early on Thursday, which is bank night—have to be there by seven or they can't get in . . . Don't miss "Shanghai" . . . Or "Ginger" . . . Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is said to be homesick for this country . . . Louise Fazenda seems to be more popular than ever . . . Now they want Leslie Howard for "The Green Light"—but he's in England.

How Thick to Build Sidewalks
The thickness of concrete sidewalks depends entirely upon the use given the walk. If for pedestrians only, four inches is sufficient if good concrete is used. Good concrete in this case would be a mixture of one sack of cement to two and one-half cubic feet of sand and three cubic feet of gravel or crushed stone. If the walk is crossed by heavy vehicles, the thickness should be increased to six inches. For flagstone or stepping-stone walks, four-inch slabs will hold up indefinitely.

BALD EAGLE HAS EARNED ITS RANK AS AIR MONARCH

Our national bird, the bald eagle, chosen in the early days of the Union, is figured on many of our coins, is a favored design in matters of patriotic interest, and in general is considered symbolic of our freedom.

Its enormous size and the striking markings of the adult make it a prominent species that is noted on every appearance. A bird of great strength and of swift and powerful flight, it is master in its haunts and has no potent enemies except man. Its life is led in the vicinity of water and only casually is it found far from that element.

The food of the bald eagle is mainly fish. In Alaska severe complaint has been made that it destroys salmon during their annual runs up the streams to deposit their eggs.

Elsewhere the eagle often fishes by plunging from a height, descending at an angle on its selected prey, sometimes going beneath the surface. Rarely it grapples prey so large that it cannot rise with it and is under necessity of towing it to shore. This eagle also robs the osprey, being fiercely predatory in such encounters.

Large birds are sometimes captured, including ducks, coots and geese. Although the eagle is sufficiently swift to seize them in flight, it ordinarily gives chase on the water, where it is able to tire them by forcing them to dive until they become exhausted.

There was much discussion before the bald eagle was finally adopted as our nation's emblem by act of congress on June 20, 1782; Benjamin Franklin in particular favored the wild turkey.—Alexander Wetmore in the National Geographic Magazine.

James John Joicey, who died recently at Witley, England, left 1,500,000 butterflies. It is said to be the second largest private collection in the world and was valued at $250,000.

Or Try To

The man who thinks the world owes him a living is going to take it out of you.

WHAT IS WEALTH?

A woman has said in court with $200,000 to her name she would not call herself rich. In another court a bankrupt said that he did not feel wealthy on $10,000 a year and sometimes was very hard on an actress who had more than $100,000 a year has told how she had spent $30,000. These people have missed a lot of fun. A man feels rich because he has a dog in his pocket is fifty times as off as any of them. His is a grand and glorious feeling.—Manchester (Eng.) Rash on Baby Caused Constant Irritation

Relieved by Cuticura

"About three months after my baby was born, eczema broke out over her body. It came out in a rash and was very red. It caused constant irritation and loss of sleep that I had to put gloves on her hands to prevent scratching. I could not bathe her.

"For nearly two years this condition lasted. Then I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and for a free sample. I bought one and after using two boxes of Cuticura with the Soap she was relieved completely of the itching. (Signed) Mrs. Raymond Parks, 18 Massachusetts Ave., North Adams, Mass.

P. E. FROST MOTOR CO.

Located At 60 Park St., Lewiston, Are Sales And Service For The Chrysler And Plymouth And Are Now Showing All Models Of The Beautiful New Airflow Chrysler And The Improved New Plymouth—Also Feature Many Bargains In Used Cars—Maintain An Expert Service Department—Tel. 4008.

The P. E. Frost Motor Co. are presenting the new 1935 line of Chrysler with the confidence that they are presenting real worth from the fact that they contain new engineering and designing advancements alone that are worth the price of the cars not to speak of their comfort and style which is always found in Chrysler products.

The Chryslers for 1935 are offered in lines of both eights and sixes which are characterized by an entirely new automobile design in which the bodies are more streamlined. The eight cylinder "airflow" Chryslers are designed to slip through the air with the least possible resistance. The front is rounded, the top curve flowing into the windshield and roof, the roof itself being sloped, curving backward and downward and the rear quarter is molded so as to minimize the dragging forces of air eddies which form behind conventional cars. This results in more comfortable riding and a person may write or sleep in the new models while traveling over all sorts of roads and it is not necessary to slow the car down for bumps or jolts ahead as they may be taken without disturbing the relaxation of three riding in a new Chrysler. The bodies are a complete unit of steel from end to end and a bridge-like frame capable of withstanding great bending and twisting forces forms the understructure. Other features are automatic clutch and booster brakes.

The new Plymouth Six is offered in many new body types, all with individual front wheel springing and 77-horsepower engine and offers you a new kind of bump-free, leveled ride. It is the only low-priced car with individual springing plus floating power, safety-steel body and hydraulic brakes and is also characterized by airwheel tires and new perfected all-weather ventilation.

They offer every service and have mechanics who are thoroughly familiar with Chrysler engineering. They will keep your motor tuned as you like it, have a complete line of Chrysler parts, and are ready to serve any model you may have.

In making this review we are pleased to compliment The P. E. Frost Motor Co. and know that their success is assured as they are offering a distinctive service in advance of the day.

E. P. Crockett FLORIST

With Floral Store At 3 Porter Street, South Paris, Features A Complete Display Of Plants And Flowers—Offers An Excellent Service In Flowers For All Occasions—Is An Excellent Floral Designer And Makes A Specialty Of Artistic Floral Designs And Emblems—Will Send Flowers Anywhere—Tel. Norway 39.

In the complexity of modern society there is no one business that has come into more prominence in the past few years than the floral house. In this community there are no florists who enjoy a wider reputation for offering the public the most complete service than E. P. Crockett of South Paris.

For centuries flowers have been a symbol of the more delicate phases of human nature and the recent development of the flower as a token of esteem and remembrance has placed it in the front rank for all social, mourning and joyful occasions. Its varied uses have made the modern florist a deep student of social etiquette and there is no one more versed in this phase of the business than the manager of this house. Place your order with him either in person, by phone or letter and he will see that your flowers arrive at the right time.

He has an excellent selection of cut flowers that includes practically all varieties and no matter what your desire may be just call him and he will see that your wishes are carried out. These are kept in the very best of condition as he has provided all facilities necessary to keep all the stock in prime bloom.

In the matter of flowers for all kinds of social functions, and for the various other occasions, E. P. Crockett has just about been made head-quarters in the section and the fact that prompt and satisfactory attention is given and phone orders brings large patronage in this department.

In this review we are glad to compliment E. P. Crockett and suggest that when in need of anything in this line you call at his favorite trading place, write to him or call over the phone and he will see that you get what you desire at very reasonable prices.

The Impending American Boom

SPRINGING INTO LIFE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY—THE FOUNDATION WHICH WAS LAID LAST YEAR IS NOW PASSING THROUGH THE SECOND STAGE AND WE ARE KNOCKING AT THE THRESHOLD OF RENEWED BUSINESS ACTIVITY—AMERICA WILL RETAIN THE LEAD OF NATIONS ON ACCOUNT OF ITS TOPIAN ACTIVITIES AND SHOW THE WORLD A NEW CIVILIZATION—OUR COMMUNITY KEEPING PACE WITH THE GREAT ADVANCES OF THE DAY.

The United States in its transition from an international to a national trade policy has been busy with the fundamentals which are necessary the coming days of the new prosperity. As a creditor nation we have been forced to do business with each other, and until other nations emerge from this policy, our development, largely lies within the confines of our republic.

More Equitable Distribution of the Products of Labor

The President, Congress and people of all political parties who are aware of the times realized that to emerge from the world depression, things must be better equalized. In the old haphazard days, it made no difference as we were all spenders and there was plenty to spend. In our national income confined chiefly to trading in our own country, for all our people to participate in the prosperity, it was necessary that various changes be made. During this process of transition, while progress has been slow and in waves at times, yet, we have been, continuing forward. Some of the measures of reconstruction have not reached their goal, but, as a whole, we are riding on to better days. So fundamental a change from not being able to dispose of our surplus abroad, but to restrict them and dispose of them at home, takes time. The proposition of supply and demand has now about been equalized. We are on the threshold of expanding demands from our own people. This is the great underlying fact that is certain to bring an ever expanding activity.

Dole Days Succeeded by Jobs for All

The vast program of public works, which is now being instituted to make the dole, assures all of a job at a living wage. This, in itself, prosperity, as, when everyone is able to spend, all are doing business and money is kept circulating. America is yet a comparatively new nation and there is much needed in the way of public works. Various ways have ideas, all of which cannot be fulfilled, even, in this vast work undone. The harnessing of nature has been the work of the discovery of fire at the brink of the burning volcano to the modern irrigating systems. While the Pharaohs built the Pyramids that thousands of years, yet they are only an ornament, while the public works which will be constructed in this new program in this country will be utility and beauty, and will surpass the Pyramids by 5000 years in engineering. We are entering upon a substantial campaign that will be planned, continuous and progressive, unfolding new ideas that are today beyond the imagination of many.

The Even Distribution of Wealth Is Changing the Living Standard

The foundation of the future demands that all be prosperous. In the old days some were making too much and others too little. The present more equitable distribution will make life more on an even tenor. The automobiles are getting smaller for the well-to-do and better for the commoner and this same trend goes through the various phases of life. Business men

H. L. WHITE

Located At Auburn, Offers An Excellent Service In Piano Tuning And Rebuilding And Is A Noted Authority On The Value Of Old Pianos, Having The Genius Of The Artisan, The Touch Of The Artist And The Ear Of The Harmonist And Offers People A Guaranteed Service At Reasonable Rates—No One Should Discard A Piano Without Consulting Him.

In the maintenance and rehabilitation of pianos there is no name that stands higher in musical circles of this section of the state than H. L. White of Auburn.

Many families possess pianos which could not be duplicated today for melody when they are placed in proper condition and no work of modern craftsmanship will approach them when they are properly polished and cared for. Their conservation during the coming years will be a treasure as the art of music in the home by the efforts of the members of the family is becoming a lost one with the prevalence of the radio, etc. It is necessary for families possessing pianos to keep them in mind and have them gone over occasionally and placed in prime condition.

H. L. White is a pianist on the rebuilding and tuning of pianos. He understands construction, both of the older and the newest instruments and is able to take any one, no matter in what condition, and you will stand in awe and amazement when he turns it over to you at the tuneful melody that can be produced.

Mr. White offers a most comfortable and rapid service. He takes complete charge and his services are very reasonable. In making this review we are pleased to compliment H. L. White upon the very prominent position he occupies in the musical world of this section of the state and to place his name among those who are preserving not only treasured musical instruments but who are adding in keeping the art of music alive in the home.

Donald J. Andrews

Donald J. Andrews of Norway is a leading authority on dairy cows and horses and is depended upon by many farmers and dairywomen who rely on him to keep the herd up to the standard.

This service is very necessary as no one has the time or opportunity to look over the country and make his own purchases. Mr. Andrews has made a study of the business and is in constant touch with the cattle industry. He keeps on hands cows of any breed, size or age you may desire in any number and will furnish them at short notice. All you have to do is to call them over the phone and your wants and needs will be taken care of and the dairy farm will be kept on a paying basis.

Mr. Andrews is thoroughly reliable and you can depend upon any advice or information he gives you about dairy cows. All you have to do is to drop him a line and he will make a survey of your herd and offer such suggestions as he thinks advisable. With your own judgment and his expert advice you will be able to come to a conclusion as to just what you need.

He also features horses and you can secure from him a horse for any purpose. We are pleased to call to the attention of all the people the necessity of calling on him occasionally to assist in the placing of dairy farms in this section of the state upon the most profitable basis.

POOR OUTLOOK

Times were dull and debts were pressing for a pair of yegs.

"Let's slip over to Simpson's Corner and clean out the Farmers' Bank there," suggested the first.

"Pooh!" puffed the second. "Are you crazy? What do you expect to get out of a bank that ain't got but three vice presidents?"

Maine Duntile, Inc.

With Plant On Dixfield Road, Mexico, And Office At 640 Prospect Ave., Rumford, Are Manufacturers And Distributors Of The Automatic Sealing Burial Vault Which Is Waterproof And Verminproof And Which Has Been Almost Universally Adopted By The People In This Section Of The State And Are Recognized As The Proper Means Of Burial—Is Steel Reinforced, Strong, And Dignified In Appearance And Absolutely Waterproof—More Beautiful Than Stone Or Steel And Enduring As The Ages—Under Direction Of S. W. And A. W. Roberts—Tel. Plant Rumford 753-R, Office 46-M.

With the growth of culture in the country more and more attention is paid to the burial and each year the use of the Automatic Sealing Burial Vault is more and more recognized.

They manufacture and distribute burial vaults which are recognized over the country as the most advanced type of vault of the day. They are made of most enduring material. Their vaults will defy time and elements and will preserve corpses and vaults perfectly. They stand all tests and are tested before they are sold. They are impossible to break and are constructed according to the most advanced ideas of modern engineering. When placed under the ground they are sealed and made waterproof and will last through the ages.

The vault is a simple structure and can be secured from the manufacturer or through your undertaker. From the dawn of civilization a variety of processes of burial have been used and we find that the most cultured people paid the most attention to seeing that when man "went to his long home" he was properly cared for. As early as 3500 years B. C. we find they made vaults of clay, but it was not until the modern invention of durable materials that civilization found processes that would endure to eternity.

In this review of the business of the period we desire to call to the attention of the people the advantages of the Automatic Sealing Burial Vault and point to The Maine Duntile, Inc. as manufacturers who are adding to the culture of the day.

With the rapid changes and swift onward progress of this section of the country it is very necessary to have signs to guide people around and call their attention to "what is what" in the various localities. Before the advent of reading, signs were used practically altogether. Not many of them depended upon the printed word, but were symbolic. Your grandfather supped at the White Horse Tavern and at the Sign of the Bear, bought his tobacco at the Sign of the Indian and each business as well as each family had a crest or coat of arms. With the rapid spread of reading this idea of sign life has disappeared and today we have the highly intelligent and informative sign that all can read and readily see what it is that is desired to be impressed upon the reader.

They have a most modern studio and offer a very complete service in real estate and other business signs for permanent or temporary use, all kinds of outdoor advertising and in those of gold leaf, office doors, canvas show cards, metal and walls.

They have made a very wide study of modern business practices and thus are in a position to offer customers not only a service that they have in mind but have a creative mind and are able to make suggestions that have individuality and distinction about them.

Another feature of the business is the rapid service that is offered. They have an ample force for quick production so that there is no delay. Often work is turned out the same day as ordered.

In this review we are glad to compliment DeWolf's Sign & Adv. Service at Norway upon the rapid development of the country and to refer this very superior service to all of our readers.

One of the best and most reliable institutions in the community is The Norway Savings Bank, and a striking example of substantial and conservative progress. Its officers have been many years in the service of the people in local financial matters, being most efficient bankers in point of service in this section and the wide experience thus gained has added to the growth of the community and to the attractiveness of its service to the people. Familiar with the needs and demands of the general public in this section of the country by reason of their long identification with this section of the state it is not strange that the reliable institution which they head has become one of the most popular of the reliable and conservative financial depositories of this section.

Everyone should have a savings account. It is a first and very important step on the road to financial independence and will be of great aid in making you sure of a competence in the twilight of life. The prudent savings play a larger part than large earnings in helping you to gain an income and create an estate for it does not matter how much you earn if you do not save you are never more than one step ahead of poverty. It is the old story of the snail and the hare; the man, who, even though his earning be small, saves consistently, will soon be a man of more capital and greater degree of financial independence than the man who, although possessing a greater capacity for earning, lacks the strength of character to save.

One of the best slogans of the day is "Put your savings in a savings bank." Here you can start an account in an institution that for many years has safeguarded its depositors and by reason of its great strength and record of integrity is a splendid institution in which to deposit your savings.

It gives us the greatest of pleasure in making this review to recommend to our readers. The Norway Savings Bank as one that is fully worthy to receive their deposits.
